aine Addresses the Closing Rally in the Maine Campaign.

The Maine Campaign

[illegible] Me., September 11.—The last rally of the republican campaign in this state was held in the spacious Coliseum in this place tonight. In the course of his remarks Blaine said: It is worth while in this last hour for discussion, standing as we do on the eve of election, to recall the peculiarities of this campaign, for certainly the [illegible] arguments submitted to the people [illegible] on the side of the opposition filled with contradictions not to say absurdities. [illegible] have apparently been unable to take any position on any question. On the leading national issue of protection they have been timid and irresolute to the last degree, occasionally putting forward rank free trade arguments through some one of their speakers and recalling or qualifying it in one of their leading organs on the succeeding day, [illegible] arguing in Maine for the Morrison bill as a whole and yet afraid to [illegible] one of the many features of [illegible] which the commercial and agricultural and manufacturing interests of Maine would be injured or destroyed. [Applause.] The [illegible] would be [illegible] any thread of consistency, any [illegible], any dash of common sense in [illegible] when the democratic party has [illegible] its campaign on that great [illegible] [illegible] to have kept up a mere [illegible] half their party while depending [illegible] for any possible chance of victory [illegible] the diversion and distraction caused [illegible] third party. And this third party in [illegible] exhibit [illegible] striking [illegible] democrats themselves in their mode of [illegible] campaign. Gen. Neal Dow, who [illegible] the last quarter of a century stood for [illegible] great witness of the value [illegible] of prohibition now declares [illegible] years it has not done a bit of good in [illegible] suppression of the liquor traffic of Maine. [Laughter.] General Dow has thus apparently [illegible] willing to set at naught his own testimony throughout this long period in order to [illegible] against the republicans. If [illegible] political action, if [illegible] honor and fair dealing among men, [illegible] republican party and its candidates exhibit [illegible] their campaign, which so far as I [illegible] to say, is now closed. I bid you a [illegible] good night. [Tremendous applause.]

A Dastardly Attempt

[illegible]ago, September 11.—A few minutes [illegible] o'clock last night James Calvin, operator sitting in the signal tower of the Lake Shore company at the intersection of the main and stock yards tracks, was [illegible] by an explosion. The tower is thirty [illegible]. Calvin had noticed nothing unusual [illegible] he was suddenly startled by seeing [illegible] of smoke arise at one side of [illegible], followed by a deafening explosion. A twenty-inch gas pipe was found, [illegible] was dynamite which caused the [illegible]. Of one hundred batteries in the [illegible] thirty-four were broken, along with [illegible] which will cost a thousand [illegible] to repair. What makes the attempt [illegible] dastardly is the fact that the out bound [illegible] train was due in a few minutes [illegible] explosion occurred. The theory of [illegible] is that wreckers hoped [illegible] the tower and when the passenger [illegible] came along to throw the [illegible] and thus they would have plunged into [illegible] of freight cars lining the track. An [illegible] attempt to wreck a train took place last [illegible] o'clock, when the Lake Shore [illegible] receiving from the Illinois Central a [illegible] of twenty-eight cars. A switch was [illegible] fifteen cars derailed. Several [illegible] been made but nothing definite [illegible] learned from the men arrested.

The Situation at Charleston

[illegible], September 11.—It is a bright beautiful day, though it rained heavily in the morning. People are gradually re[illegible] and the number in shel[illegible] is rapidly diminishing. There [illegible] slight shocks of earthquake [illegible] but not serious, and comparatively few persons were aware of their occurrence. The [illegible] committee has [illegible] and has ap[illegible] for each ward to ascertain [illegible] all of which will be supplied [illegible] board of engineers are [illegible] buildings and continue [illegible] sites. Latest [illegible] the South Carolina [illegible] reports of distress at [illegible] and elsewhere are [illegible] exaggerated.

Removal of the Apaches

[illegible], N. M., September 11.—The [illegible] tomorrow will say: General Miles [illegible] here last night to meet 400 Chiricahua and Warm Spring Indians which will pass through here tomorrow from San Carlos reservation by way of St. Louis to Fort Marion, Florida. They are the war element of the Apaches and their removal rids the southwest of all Indian trouble. General Miles states that regardless of what the Army and Navy Journal states as reported in yesterday's dispatches—the Chiricahua and Warm Spring Indians were disarmed and were not prisoners of war. They were placed on the Apache reservation against the protest of the interior department and the people of Arizona, and it is well known here that their removal when accomplished will be all the work of General Miles, who has been arranging the matter for five months against much opposition.

The Mexican Revolution

St. Louis, September 11.—A Matamoras, Mexico correspondent of the Globe-Democrat telegraphs tonight that advices received there today state that revolutionists 150 strong under Mauricio Cruz were overtaken by troops under Colonels Hernandez and Bovazos near El Fierro about 150 miles up the country and signally defeated with heavy loss in killed and wounded and thirty prisoners. The loss to the troops was light.

Denver, September 11.—The cases against County Clerk Chas. H. Scott for forgery, which were commenced in the criminal court last Monday, ended this evening and were given to the jury at 11 o'clock tonight.

A Mining Sale

Denver, September 11.—A News Georgetown special says: The Red Elephant group of mines situated on Red Elephant mountain were sold at sheriff's sale today to Diamond Joe Reynolds for $[illegible].

A Fatal Affray

St. Louis, September 11.—A special from Houston, Mo., says: Night before last at a farm [illegible] near Summerville, 2[illegible] miles southeast of Houston in this county, occurred one of the most fatal tragedies ever known in this section. Last Saturday at Summerville, during a game of base ball, Jere Orchard and [illegible] Martin engaged in a violent dispute, but were separated before coming to blows. Last Thursday a corn cutting was given at the residence of a farmer near Summerville and during the dancing in the evening the base ball dispute was revived and pistols were drawn. In the melee that ensued Orchard was [illegible] to discharge his weapon at Martin, the bullet passing entirely through the latter's body from the back to breast. Orchard was thereupon attacked by a friend of Martin, Stogsdale by name, who shot him in the breast, inflicting a mortal wound. He (Stogsdale) not satisfied with his bloody work, attacked other friends of Martin, the first being Sam McCaskell, who sustained a wound from the former's pistol over the heart. Lewis Kidder, a man of great strength, thinking this indiscriminate shooting had gone far enough, rushed through the crowd and attempted to disarm Stogsdale. The latter had one more charge in his pistol. This he fired at Kidder, the ball taking effect in the latter's thigh, inflicting an ugly wound. Martin, Orchard and McCoskell are, it is believed, fatally wounded, and Kidder dangerously. Great excitement prevails over the affair. Stogsdale has not been captured and is believed to be on his way to Texas.

The Labor Bureau

Washington, September 11.—Carroll D. Wright, commissioner of labor, today submitted to the secretary of the interior his report of the operations of the labor bureau for the year ended June 30, 1886. The commissioner says: Special agents of the bureau are now actively employed in field work connected with convict labor, strikes, and women workers of the great cities. Investigations relating to labor, wages, etc., of railway employes in the United States have been delayed until some portion of the force of special agents can be relieved from work on which it is now engaged, from the fact of the late organization of the bureau in 1885. You will notice that it is impossible to submit at this time the matter constituting the second annual report of the bureau. I am hoping, however, by vigorous efforts to be able to submit the results of the investigation relating to convict labor and perhaps to strikes before the expiration of the present calendar year, and those relating to other investigations authorized at the proper time in 1887.

A Trunk Mystery

Toledo, Ohio, September 11.—This afternoon a trunk arrived by the Wheeling and Lake Erie road from Bellevue which exhaled so horrible an odor as to drive the baggage man from his post. It was placed on the platform and police authorities notified. Soon after this arrival E. Wilson, who had come from Bellevue on the Lake Shore road, arrived with a dray and presented a check for the trunk. He was immediately arrested and the trunk opened, when it was found to contain the body of a woman packed in hay. Wilson and the trunk were then taken to the police station, where the coroner examined the body. It was that of a woman about [illegible], clad partly [illegible] underclothing of the finest quality. Wilson is a school teacher of Ithaca, Ohio, and has [illegible] college. He is held on the charge of grave robbery. He refuses to talk.

Railroads Injured by Washouts

Albuquerque, N. M., September 11.—By heavy wa[illegible] near Alamillo, twelve miles north of Socorro, a bridge over the Salado river in the same vicinity was badly injured. A transfer of passengers was made today. Several days before the road was in running order. Two bridges on the Atlantic and Pacific are badly injured.

THE AMERICA'S CUP.

The Pride of Boston Nobly Defends the Trophy

Second and Deciding Trial Sailed Yesterday.

England's Champion Beaten in Strong and Light Winds.

The Second Trial

Highlands, N. J., September 11—9 [illegible] a. m.—This was the day fixed upon by the America's cup committee for the third of the series of international races, providing that the sloop and cutter had each won one of the contests, but because of the fizzle on Thursday the second race is the event of today. Just before sunrise this morning a heavy mist hung over the ocean, but when the sun burst forth the fog began to disappear and after half an hour had elapsed it was gone entirely. At 9 25 the wind appeared to be steadily increasing and became quite heavy. This together with the tumbling sea is just what the cutter people have been crying for. The Mayflower's supporters seemed to be satisfied with any kind of wind. Early this morning it looked as though the day would be an excellent one. Later on it became thick outside, and dark threatening clouds began to roll up. The sea was dotted with white-winged craft moving about waiting for the big sloops. Crowds of yachting enthusiasts filled up the beach and hotel verandas. The ladies wore regulation yachting blue and were interested spectators, while everything human wanted to bet on the Boston sloop. There were not many takers, because the sloop showed her weatherly qualities while the wind blew Thursday. Incoming trains brought hundreds of people from New York who did not care to risk their lives on steamers. The little accidents that resulted from the heavy fog on the last day had its effect. The steamers were by no means deserted, however, and had enough people aboard to fill every deck. Tugs by the dozen with special parties also came down and hundreds of fishing smacks brought out a good many people. Navesink Highlands offered as good a view as anywhere along the coast, and consequently the bluff was lined with people. At [illegible] the wind had freshened to about twenty three miles an hour and came out of the northwest in gusts. The race is twenty miles to leeward, the yachts to turn a stake boat opposite Ocean beach.

The Mayflower crossed the line at 11 [illegible], and the Galatea at 11 [illegible] 55. The wind was west northwest fifteen miles an hour.

Sandy Hook, September 11.—At 11 58 the yachts had gone about a mile over the course. They were standing southeast. Their position is about the same as when they started. The Mayflower was about a mile ahead.

At 12 0[illegible] p. m. the yachts had gone about three miles, the Mayflower leading by a quarter of a mile, wind 23 miles an hour.

At 12 17 the yachts had gone about six miles over the course. The Mayflower is gradually opening the gap and is nearly half a mile ahead, wind 15 miles.

At 12 48 the yachts had gone about twelve miles over the course, still standing southeast. The Mayflower is increasing her lead and is nearly a mile ahead, wind 19 miles, northeast.

The iron sloop yacht Priscilla accompanied the yachts over the course. She had her light sails set and led the Mayflower at noon by a quarter of a mile and seemed to be outsailing the racers. At 1 08 the Mayflower was still increasing her lead, and was 1 [illegible] miles ahead.

At 1 [illegible] p. m. the Mayflower turned the off shore stake boat on the home stretch.

Sandy Hook, September 11.—The Galatea turned the stake boat at 2 10 10, the Mayflower three miles ahead, wind twelve miles.

Sandy Hook, September 11.—At [illegible] p. m. the Mayflower was over three miles ahead and to the windward. The wind dying out, now about eight or nine miles an hour. Unless the wind freshens it is not believed the yachts can finish within the time limit.

Sandy Hook, September 11.—The Galatea set her jib topsail at [illegible] 16 p. m. and a minute after one was run up on the Mayflower. At [illegible] 40 the wind had shifted more to the westerly and stiffened some. The yachts were [illegible] of Long Branch and had about 15 miles to go. At 4 59 the Galatea appeared to outpoint the Mayflower, but was still half a mile to leeward. The wind is eight miles and streaky.

New York, September 11.—5 15 p. m.—The yachts are coming up close along shore. The race it made will be very close. The Galatea seems to have a good breeze now, but in the last ten minutes has dropped astern. Unless the wind freshens up the race cannot be made. The Mayflower is still three miles ahead.

[illegible] The Mayflower is [illegible] Highlands standing on the port tack for the Scotland lightship. The Galatea is four miles astern.

Sandy Hook, September 11, [illegible] 50 p. m.—The Mayflower wins.

PARTICULARS OF THE RACE

New York, September 11.—Today a race has decided upon which side of the Atlantic the America's cup shall stay for at least another year. It resulted in a glorious victory for the sloop Mayflower. When she finished this evening at [illegible] 15 40 the Galatea was nearly two miles astern. The course was 20 miles to leeward and return from the Scotland lightship. The race was sailed in a breeze that blew fresh from the northwest for three hours, then canting two points to the westward it fell light, the last hours of the contest being little better than a drift. The Mayflower only had eight minutes and two seconds to spare when she crossed the finish line, as the time limit of the race was seven hours. The Galatea was defeated on every point of sailing by the Mayflower. In the run out to the outer mark, with spinnakers set, she was beaten 1 minute, 45 seconds, and in windward work over half an hour. There is great rejoicing among yachtsmen here tonight, while Bostonians are fairly wild with delight.

Off whistle buoy at 11 [illegible] the Galatea was cast off. Her crew soon made sail, while the Mayflower did the same. When the judges' boat was alongside the Galatea Lloyd [illegible], representing the New York Yacht club, told the regatta committee that Lieutenant Henn was very sick in the cabin and that he wished the course to be made 15 miles instead of [illegible] so as to be sure and finish within a reasonable time. In case it should fall calm he wished the Luckenbach to tow the cutter back if the race was not completed so that he could see a doctor early. Secretary Robinson said he would consult with General Paine as to the length of the course. That gentleman when seen said he would leave the matter entirely in the hands of the committee. They decided that the course should be south east 2[illegible] miles, and steering back to the Galatea that course was given [illegible]. Captain Bradford was sailing the cutter. Beavor Webb looked after the sails while Mrs. Henn peeped out of the companionway with an anxious look in her eye, for her husband's condition alarmed her considerably.

A fleet of steam and sailing craft nearly as large as that of Thursday had assembled near the starting point, Scotland lightship. The mammoth flag bedecked steamers Grand Republic and Columbia and the iron steamers Sirius, Cepheus, and Taurus were black with their human freight of yachting enthusiasts. The breeze was freshening every moment, and as it was the first time the yachts had come together where the first half of the contest was to be sailed to leeward there was much discussion as to the probable result. When the starting signal was given at 11 [illegible]0 the Mayflower was in an excellent position, square to the northwest of an imaginary line drawn between the Scotland lightship and the Luckenbach, a cable's length to the northward of it. Her spinnaker boom was down to port and [illegible]0 seconds after the signal the great sail blossomed out amid wild cheers from thousands on the Grand Republic, with the main boom broad off to the starboard. Her pyramid of snowy duck gleaming in the sunlight and a smother of foam at her sides, the Boston beauty dashed across the line well in the lead. The cutter was a quarter of a mile to westward when the whistle blew. She came along with the wind abeam till she crossed the bow of the lightship close aboard. Then squaring away, her spinnaker was sheeted out exactly on a line, and the third day's battle had begun. The official time of the start was Mayflower 11 22 40½, Galatea 11 24 10. With a twenty-mile run before them, there was an excellent opportunity to test their speed, in a steady breeze and with very little sea to impede their progress. That the "stern chase is a long one," was never better illustrated than in that 20 mile run. For about [illegible]0 minutes the Galatea held her own with the sloop but after that she was practically out of the race, for the Mayflower was leading her nearly a mile when half the distance of the outer mark was covered. Steamboat captains regarded past warnings and kept well away from the contestants. At 12 50 the outer mark hove in sight and in half an hour a fleet of steamers numbering 31 in all had gathered around it to await the coming of the yachts. The wind had fallen light and had canted a point to the westward. Down came the trio like white winged birds before the wind. The Mayflower's balloon jib topsail came in at 1 41 [illegible]0. Four minutes later in came her spinnaker and at 1 5[illegible] she jybed to port and came for the mark close hauled on the starboard, luffing grandly round it a few moments later amid a serenade of steam whistles. The pride of Boston under three lower sails and club topsails began her windward work with a lead of nearly a mile. The Galatea jybed at 1 [illegible]0, having doused her spinnaker three minutes before. The time of rounding the outer mark was: Mayflower 1 [illegible] 05, Galatea 2 10 30. The Priscilla luffed around the mark only three minutes after the Mayflower. The Galatea made a very pretty picture as she laid down to her scuppers and began her chase to windward after the sloop. Both had about all the wind they needed for their club topsails. Captain Stone put the Mayflower about at 1 55 and stood to northward. Beavor Webb, who was sailing the Galatea, refused to tack. At 2 [illegible]3 Capt. Stone brought the Boston sloop around again. She was then over a mile on the cutter's beam. Two minutes before going about the Mayflower took in her club topsails. She carried her working topsail for an hour, when the wind having lightened considerably, she set the club topsail again, also her baby jibtop-sail, the Galatea having set hers shortly before. Both yachts went about at 4 20 and stood to the northward. They were off [illegible] beach at this time, and the wind was growing

The removal of the war element of the Apaches is to be placed to the credit of General Miles.

Collectors of customs on the Pacific coast are waiting patiently for the appearance of a number of Chinamen who landed at Atlantic ports in their journey to China across the continent.

Two attempts were made to wreck Lake Shore trains at Chicago yesterday, in one of which dynamite was used. More good work must be done by the Chicago courts before person and property are safe there.

Maine elects a governor, congressmen and legislature to-morrow. The closing rally of the campaign was held at Gardiner last night. The result will be interesting on account of the hard work done by the third party, which hopes to give the republicans a surprise, to the extent of putting the democrats in office.

Parnell's moderate land bill will come up for second reading on Tuesday. It is not considered improbable that Gladstone and Chamberlain may combine in its support and obtain a sufficient number of liberals to turn the tories out of office. The Birmingham Mail, which is Chamberlain's organ, has indicated a disposition to support some such settlement as Parnell proposes, and observers assert that Chamberlain must be inclined to meet Parnell half-way on the proposed measures, or his inspired organ would never have printed such an article.

The Galatea, like her sister, the Genesta, will have to return to England without the coveted America's cup. It is unfortunate that Lieut. Henn will have a large sized "H" to take back to his brother yachtsmen of England. The course was covered yesterday in barely time enough to make it an accepted race. It is the fact that the Mayflower showed her superiority in heavy wind more than in a light one, but the friends of the cutter have prayed for a gale and a heavy sea, and the second trial should have been under such conditions. Still, if the owner of the Galatea wishes to be satisfied on this point he can find out whether the Mayflower is a mere racing machine or a vessel capable of weathering a gale. General Paine's challenge to sail a race across Massachusetts bay in a gale of wind gives him an opportunity to prove his theory and decide an international question as to the weatherly qualities of the two types, as well as their speed under the conditions desired by cutter advocates.

The London Times announces that the business men of England have been converted by the stern logic of events into a belief in bi-metallism. The steady fall in values and the subsequent depression in the trade of the world during the last fifteen years can only be accounted for on the theory that the demonetization of silver has so enhanced the purchasing power of gold that the business of the commercial world has had to be transacted upon an insufficient money basis. At first it was supposed there might be a temporary overproduction of goods, but a little reflection showed that this theory was absurd in view of the myriads of people who needed food and clothing and found increasing difficulty in getting them. The distress in trade, it is now seen, is due to an artificial scarcity of money caused by taking away one-half of the metallic money of mankind. The only two nations that are at all prosperous are the United States, which keeps on coining silver dollars, and Germany, out of debt and with taxation very light, and which can, under gold mono-metallism, produce goods so cheaply as to be able to undersell all her rivals, especially Great Britain and France. The Times hopes that a change in the English policy will follow the report of the special commission which Lord Randolph Churchill will endeavor to have appointed to inquire into the necessity of remonetizing silver by the commercial nations.

LITERARY NOTES.

Mr. George Manville Fenn has a new novel ready, "The Master of the Ceremonies."

The bones of Thomas Paine are still unburied. They are said to be in the possession of an English preacher.

E. P. Roe's novel, "He Fell in Love With His Wife," will soon be brought out in book form by Dodd, Mead & Co.

A monograph on Ben Jonson is to be written by Mr. J. A. Symonds. It will be included in the "English Worthies Series."

The first number of the new Scribner's Magazine will appear on the first day of next January. Mr. Stamford White is to contribute the cover.

Harper & Brothers are still printing edition after edition of Gen. Lew Wallace's Ben-Hur. More than 100,000 copies have been sold thus far in all.

Mr. Arlo Bates, editor of the Boston Courier, is about to bring out through the press of Roberts Brothers a volume of verse entitled "Berries of the Brier."

"Cousin Pons," the next volume in Roberts Brothers' series of translations from Balzac, will appear this month. It will be followed by "The Country Doctor."

All the short stories lately published by Mr. Frank Stockton have been collected in a volume which the Scribners will issue under the title of "The Christmas Wreck."

Mr. Nathan Haskell Dole is translating the "Marta y Maria" of Don Armando Palacia Valdes, a Spanish novel, for T. Y. Crowell & Co., to be published early in the autumn.

"A Secret Inheritance" is the title of the serial story by B. L. Fargeon, the first chapters of which will appear in the October number of "The English Illustrated Magazine."

Thirty-five thousand copies of Mr. Rider-Haggard's story of "King Solomon's Mines" have already been sold—which seems to show that there is still a demand for romance.

Prof. Richard T. Ely's book on "The Labor Movement in America," which T. Y. Crowell & Co. have now nearly ready, will be a complete historical review and will also deal with the present outlook of labor agitation.

The Rev. J. G. Wood, most indefatigable of writers on natural history, is about to bring out a new volume of "Half-Hours with a Naturalist." The book, which is profusely illustrated, is coming from the press of T. Whittaker.

Lord Tennyson is said by the Athenæum to have written a number of new poems, including a postscript to "Locksley Hall," in which the hero appears as a broken down man of eighty with modified views of life and liberty.

Mr. W. D. Howells is receiving subscriptions for the purchase from Mr. Osgood of the Healey portrait of Longfellow. It is proposed to pay for the portrait the sum of $1,500 and to place it in the Memorial hall of Harvard university.

A translation of Turgueneff's "Song of Triumphant Love" opens the list of articles in the September "Cosmopolitan." Mary E. Wilkins contributes a rustic story; and Mr. Hornaday offers a second lively instalment of "A Yankee in Canton."

Colonel John Hay's eagerly looked-for "Life of Abraham Lincoln" will be introduced to the public in a few weeks. Not as a whole, however; it will make its appearance in serial form in the pages of "The Century." The first installment will be published in the November number.

With the publication of one more volume Sir Richard F. Burton's edition of "The Thousand Nights and a Night" as originally planned will be complete. He has, however, concluded to add to the ten volumes five supplemental ones containing Arabic tales not found in the Macnaghten or Bulak editions.

All the later essays of Edwin Percy Whipple were by himself confided to Ticknor & Co. for publication. The volume, which will soon be published by that firm, will contain Mr. Whipple's reminiscences of Sumner, Choate, Motley and Agassiz, and will be prefaced by a portrait and by Bartol's memorial address.

The test of good poetry, as of good wine, an English critic says, is not analysis, but taste; and he adds: "A collection of really good poetry made by a good critic such as Palgrave's 'Golden Treasury'—helps more to elevate the popular standard of poetic excellence and to fix an absolute standard than any quantity of laborious analysis, in the details of which probably no two critics agree."

Mr. J. B. Millet, who is to supervise the illustrations of the new "Scribner," has had the charge of some of the most important works brought out by [illegible]. Mr. Vedder's "Omar Khayyam" is one of the books which owe much to his superintendence. Mr. Millet is a brother of Mr. Frank D. Millet, and used to be the art critic of "The Boston Advertiser," and has been a contributor to "The Atlantic" and other magazines.

The recent uncovering of the mummy of Rameses II, "King of Egypt and oppressor of the Jews in the time of Moses"—in a word the Pharaoh of the Old Testament—is to be commemorated by Cupples, Upham & Co. in an illustrated broadside giving in full Professor Maspero's report and the letter of Brugsch-Bey, with three engravings from photographs of the mummy stripped of its coverings and displaying the strongly marked, masterful features.

The Duke des Cars having given his sanction to the publication, the memoirs of his great-grandmother, the Duchess de Tourzel, have at last appeared both in France and England. Madame de Tourzel was the governess of the children of Louis XVI. She accompanied the royal family in the flight to Varennes, was imprisoned in La Force with the Princess de Lamballe and in the temple with Madame, and narrowly escaped the guillotine. Her narrative is pathetic and without exaggeration. It goes to show that there can be no doubt of the little Dauphin's death.

W. J. LEMOYNE.

[illegible] sterling actor has been at the Madison [illegible] three years. Formerly, for many [illegible] he was at the Boston Museum, and before that at the Boston theatre and Howard [illegible] in that city. The latter theatre he [illegible] to go to the war in 1862, and he came [illegible] to the profession again after his three [illegible] service expired. Lemoyne is [illegible] now the best living exponent of [illegible] remarkable characters that Charles Dickens drew, like Uriah Heep, Newman Noggs, [illegible]. He is also a good amateur oil painter.

WALDEN RAMSAY,

[illegible] handsome and proper young man with [illegible] who is commonly supposed to be [illegible] Palmer's luck, as Dan Harkins used to be [illegible] Daly's. There is Mr. [illegible], of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Around the Corner finally, [illegible] [illegible] of this organization, which is now on its first tour away from its home theater.

FRIDAY EVENING'S BLAZE.

Hermann's Hotel on the Manitou Road Destroyed.

A representative of the GAZETTE yesterday visited the scene of the conflagration of Friday evening. The ruins were found still smoking, though the destruction was so complete that not even a board remained of what was once Hermann's hotel. The trees in the neighborhood of the building were all scorched and entirely denuded of leaves. In conversation with Mr. Albert Gould, the following information was obtained: Mr. Gould is an expressman, and lives right adjoining the building destroyed. He was at Manitou very late last evening, engaged in moving some furniture. About ten minutes past 11 o'clock he saw the flames of a large fire and at once knew that it was in the vicinity of his residence. He at once galloped his horses down the road and gave the alarm. When he reached the building he saw no one, but when the alarm was given it was taken up by a dozen Italians and several men only partially clothed rushed out of the building and proceeded down the road. Mr. Gould stated that the building burned very rapidly and it was but a very short time before it was totally consumed. From Mr. G. Hattox, who drives Mr. Hermann's ice wagon and who was sleeping in the building, we learned the following: Mr. Hattox before retiring about ten o'clock went through the building and retired to his room back of the dining room. He found no signs of fire, and thought everything about the building perfectly secure. About half past ten he was awakened by the cry of fire, uttered by an Italian, and also heard several persons moving overhead. He at first supposed the men were intoxicated and were indulging in some joke, but he soon smelt smoke and heard the crackling noise which is produced by the burning of dry lumber. He at once threw open the door of his room, which led into the dancing hall, and found, as he says, the entire ceiling and sides one mass of flames. He ran across the room out into the road and soon after the second story of the building fell in. Mr. Hattox saw four or five men—he was uncertain as to the exact number—in the road, but did not recognize any of them. Mr. Hermann, the proprietor of the building, went to Pueblo on Friday afternoon. He stated that about a month or six weeks ago he rented the lower floor of the building to Messrs. McMurtrie and Streeter, contractors on the Midland, for a lodging house. A short time afterwards he was informed that every room in the building, both on the first and second floors, was being used for lodging purposes. Mr. Hermann visited the building and found that a large quantity of straw had been deposited in nearly all the rooms on the second floor which were occupied mostly by Italians. He informed Mr. Streeter of the condition of affairs and asked him to remedy the matter. Mr. Streeter told [illegible] that he was powerless to do anything, and Mr. Hermann afterwards learned that Messrs. McMurtrie and Streeter had rented the building for the firm of Murray & Reed, who were ignorant of the exact terms of the lease. Mr. Hermann then informed them that he would double the rent and they moved out. A few days afterward the man in his employ who sleeps in the building informed him that parties came in during the night and occupied rooms on the second floor. Mr. Hermann went down again and found several Italians there whom he warned off, though he rented two of the rooms to three Italians. He also made them take out most of the hay and straw as he knew that it would materially assist the progress of a fire. Mr. Hermann stated that the outer door of the building through which one could enter and ascend to the second story was unlocked, and it was impossible to fasten it securely on account of its being sprung, so by this means any one could reach the second story without awakening Mr. Hermann's man. Mr. Hermann thinks the cause of the fire was due to the carelessness of the dagos on the second floor, who in striking matches to light their pipes may have set fire to what straw and hay was left in the rooms. He does not think that it was done through malice but attributes it to carelessness. Mr. Hermann refused $3500 for the building a few months ago, and had it insured for $1200.

The Markets.

NEW YORK, September 11.—Governments dull and firm. Stocks showed more animation than on any previous day this week, and there was one hour of fairly active trading. The statement of the New York Central, which was specially favorable, helped materially to produce this result, aided by a successful settlement of difficulties under discussion at Chicago and renewed purchasing for account of Chicago people in London. The market was strong from the opening to the close. The opening was tame but strong, and while first prices generally showed advances, of from ⅛ to ½ per cent the trading though firm was quiet until after 11 o'clock. Later the market settled down to the usual dullness but remained firm until the close, which was at the best prices of the day.

The Mail and Express says: Mining shares to-day were fairly active. Deadwood Terror sold up to 2.75 on favorable mine reports; Ontario sold at 25, Independence 30, DeSmet 1, Sierra Nevada 55, Belle Isle 42.

An Indian Murder.

FORT SMITH, Ark., September 11. A horrible murder was committed last evening at 6 o'clock near Scullyville, Choctaw Nation, by Lewis Burrows, a half-breed. Burrows had a quarrel with Wm. Morgan, white man, about seventy cents which he claimed was owing him from Morgan's nephew. Angry words followed and Burrows becoming enraged raised a sharp axe he had at hand and struck Morgan on the left shoulder with such force that the blade cut into his body and split his heart wide open. Morgan died instantly and Burrows was arrested by a deputy marshal who was near. He was brought here this afternoon and lodged in the United States jail where with twenty-one other murderers he awaits trial.

Taking the Lead.

The 7.30 mine at Georgetown is fast taking the lead as one of the heaviest producers in Clear Creek county and is being actively developed by a force of about 80 men. The finest grade of ore at present is found in the 240-foot level west. The streak is steadily improving, and now mills from 1200 to 1400 ozs. per ton. In the No. 2 west a fine streak is opened up for 200 feet, and is being drifted and stoped with good results. The 575 foot level which is at present the bottom of the mine, is turning out some very rich ore, being nearly solid gray copper. The tunnel level is looking better than it has for years past, having a vein of solid ore, together with a large quantity of rock containing native silver, milling over 500 ozs. to the ton. The 375-foot level is being driven east on contract underneath a large body of ore already opened up by the 310 level. The whole aspect of the mine is as flattering as any one could wish.
